

How to Sign Up for The Design for Learning Program

D4L provides a series of free online modules for library workers to learn how to design instruction and teach online. The program's modules lead toward a final Capstone project.

1. Create an account for Webjunction at

<https://learn.webjunction.org/login>

Follow the steps on the right to sign up for an account. (If you've taken WebJunction classes before, you can just log in on the left).

2. After you confirm your registration, login at

<https://learn.webjunction.org/login>

3. On the top navigation, click on "CATALOG HOME" (on smaller devices you will need to click on the menu icon to see this)

4. Scroll down under Course Categories and click on "D4L: Online Teaching Skills for Library Workers"

5. On the new page that appears, scroll down and click on the name of the module you want to sign up for (probably Orientation to start)

6. On the new page that opens, scroll down to click on the blue button that says "Enroll Me"

Enroll me

7. Whenever you start a new module, first click where it says Getting Started (with a green book icon).

 Getting Started

7 Modules available online for free at

 WebJunction[®]
The learning place for libraries.
bit.ly/D4L-WJ

This project was made possible in part by the Institute of Museum and Library Services (imls.gov), Laura Bush 21st Century Librarian Grant Project #RE-06-14- 0014-14.

Empire State
Library Network

School of Information Studies
SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

INSTITUTE of
Museum and Library
SERVICES